Contributors

Natalia Bazoge is a lecturer at the University of Grenoble Alpes (France) and a member of the Sport and Social Environment Laboratory (SENS - EA 3742). Her research focuses on the gendered history of sports practices and school physical education.

Logan Ross Bevis is a graduate research assistant in the Department of History at the University of West Florida. The author has spent more than two years researching the effects of boxing and other combat sports on the development of the ideals of masculinity in the southern United States during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

John D. Fair is Adjunct Professor of Kinesiology in the Stark Center for Physical Culture and Sports at the University of Texas, Austin. He is author of eight books, including British Interparty Conferences (Oxford, 1980), Harold Temperley (Delaware, 1992), Muscletown USA (Penn State, 1999), Mr. America (Texas, 2015), and Muscles in the Movies (Missouri, 2020). He has also published 155 refereed and non-refereed articles, including all of the physical culture entries in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, and 109 book reviews in scholarly journals. Dr. Fair retired as Professor of History (Emeritus) from Auburn University (1997) and from Georgia College & State University (2012).

Nathan V. Fawaz (they/them) is a PhD student in the Faculty of Kinesiology, Sport, and Recreation at the University of Alberta. Fawaz’s research and creative work is in equity, diversity, and inclusion interventions and education; posttraumatic/postpathologic expression and experience; somatic-literary automythography; and speculative non-fiction; all of which has them thinking about lineage, inheritance, and what compounds in bodies through ongoing and accumulated disregard across generations.

Sebastien Fleuriel is a full professor at Nantes Université, CNRS, CENS, UMR 6025, F-44000 Nantes, France, where he teaches sociology of work and sociology of sport. His research focuses mainly on sports workers and high-performance sport.

Kieran James is a senior lecturer in the School of Business & Creative Industries at the University of the West of Scotland (Paisley campus) and adjunct professor at the University of Fiji (Saweni campus). His research focuses on Indonesian popular music, men and masculinities, race and class, Singapore politics, sport history, and sociology of sport. He has published articles on Australian soccer’s ethnic clubs; race, ethnicity, and class issues in Fiji soccer; and Indonesian popular music.
Matthew Klugman is a senior research fellow in the Institute for Health and Sport; a member of the Community, Identity and Displacement Research Network; and co-convenor of the Olympic Research Network at Victoria University. His research studies include the intersecting histories of race, emotions, sports, gender, sexuality, medicine, science, migration, and bodies. He co-authored the book Black and Proud: The Story of an Iconic AFL Photo (NewSouth, 2013).

Malcolm MacLean is a senior research associate at the University of Gibraltar, an honorary associate professor in the School of Human Movement and Nutrition Sciences at The University of Queensland, and an honorary research fellow in the International Centre for Sports History and Culture at De Montfort University. His work focuses on sport cultures in settler colonial contexts, sporting and other cultural boycotts, and philosophical analyses of play and playfulness.

Taylor McKee is an assistant professor in the Department of Sport Management at Brock University. His research interests include the interplay between violence, masculinity, media, and Canadian sport. He is also the co-founding editor of the Journal of Emerging Sport Studies.

Yogesh Nadan is a lecturer in the Department of Accounting at Fiji National University. His research interests include the areas of financial accounting and auditing, corporate social responsibility reporting, and accounting history and sports.

Emalee Nelson is a PhD student in Kinesiology and Health Education, Physical Culture and Sport Studies at The University of Texas at Austin. Her research focuses on twentieth century women’s sport history. Her dissertation highlights the experiences of women athletes navigating expectations of femininity in the early Cold War years.
Ornella Nzindukiyimana is an associate professor in the Department of Human Kinetics at St. Francis Xavier University (on the unceded territory of the Mi’kmaq People). Her main area of research is the socio-historical study of Black people in twentieth century Canadian sport, with a focus on how immigration, nationalism, and the intersection of race and gender shaped Black Canadians’ practices and experiences.

Christine O’Bonsawin is an associate professor in the Department of History/Indigenous Studies Program at the University of Victoria. She is an Abenaki member of Odanak First Nation. Her recent work has focused mainly on Indigenous peoples’ legal and political rights in settler colonial Canada, particularly in hosting the Olympic Games on unceded Indigenous territories. She remains committed to researching, writing, and teaching in areas related to sport, Olympic, and Indigenous histories to support the advancement of Indigenous rights in settler colonial Canada and beyond.

Bruno Papin is a lecturer at Nantes Université, CNRS, CENS, UMR 6025, F-44000 Nantes, France. His research focuses on the sociology of high-level sport and mainly on the processes of making sports elites at the crossroads of socialization spaces.

Danielle Peers (they/them) is Canada Research Chair (Tier II, SSHRC) in Disability and Movement Cultures and an associate professor in the Faculty of Kinesiology, Sport, and Recreation at the University of Alberta. Peers mobilizes intersectional disability justice approaches to study how movement cultures (including art, recreation, and sport) can be used to transmit and transform a community’s values, politics, and (in)equities.

Lindsay Parks Pieper is Associate Professor of Sport Management and Director of the Gender Studies Program at the University of Lynchburg. She is a sport historian whose research interests include women’s sport history, gender and sport, and Olympic history.

MacIntosh Ross is an assistant professor of kinesiology at Western University. He teaches and researches Canadian sport history and the intersection of sport and human rights.

Yves Travaillot, Maître de Conférences à l’INSPE d’Aquitaine, LACES (EA 7437), Membre du groupe de recherches historiques et sociologiques de la FFEPGV. Ses recherches s’articulent autour de deux thématiques principales:

Baptiste Viaud is a lecturer at Nantes Université, CNRS, CENS, UMR 6025, F-44000 Nantes, France. His work focuses on the genesis and construction of the links between “sport” and “health” in the French sports system from the end of the nineteenth century to the present day.