

International Journal of Sports Physiology and Performance

Call for Papers for a Special Issue: Rugby World Cup 2023

Submissions Accepted Through March 31, 2023

Guest Editors

David Pyne, University of Canberra, Australia
(david.pyne@canberra.edu.au)

Liam Kilduff, Swansea University, United Kingdom
(l.kilduff@swansea.ac.uk)

Christian Cook, University of New England, Australia
(christian.cook@une.edu.au)

We are issuing a call for submissions to a Rugby World Cup (RWC) themed issue of the International Journal of Sports Physiology and Performance (IJSPP). This issue of IJSPP will be released in September 2023 coinciding with the 2023 RWC in France.

We are seeking submissions of Original Investigations (3500 words) and Brief Reports (1500 words). Submissions are now open with a final date of 31 March 2023. This deadline is to allow time for peer review and revisions before 30 June 2023 (production deadline).

IJSPP features studies involving sports physiology and performance. Our call covers both men and women's rugby, and 15 and 7's formats of the sport including referees. Please feel free to develop an appropriate title and content at your discretion. All submissions will be screened for suitability by the Guest Editors before peer review—submission is no guarantee of final acceptance. Of course, IJSPP is geared toward applied research, so we require a balance between theoretical and practical aspects.

Please advise of your intention to submit a manuscript by e-mailing Professor David Pyne (David.Pyne@canberra.edu.au) and Professor Kilduff (l.kilduff@swansea.ac.uk), providing a working title and indicative date of submission by 30 November 2022. This information will assist our planning and development of the RWC issue. We could also call on your services for manuscript review of other rugby manuscripts submitted for this issue.

More details about IJSPP and our Author Guidelines are available at the journal website: <http://www.humankinetics.com/IJSPP/journalAbout.cfm>

Our web-based submission site is located at http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/hk_ijspp