Atherosclerotic lesions start to develop in early childhood. Long-term effects of exercise, fitness and body composition on arterial health were studied in adolescent males.

Results independent on maturation, blood pressure and smoking habits.

Arterial structure in adolescent males is associated with physical activity at 12-years while relationship with CRF can be seen in late adolescence and cumulatively from puberty to late adolescence.

https://doi.org/10.1123/pes.2022-0002