

Call for Special Issue Proposals Sport History Review

Sport History Review (SHR) invites scholars to submit a special issue proposal. The purpose of the special issue is to provide a collection of articles on a specific topic the journal has not covered substantially and/or is an emerging or underdeveloped theme in sport history scholarship. The special issue should have the potential to be of high interest to readers.

Published since 1970, with an editorial review board that boasts members from around the world, SHR is committed to addressing topics of international interest. SHR is devoted to promoting the study of all facets of the broad field of the history of sport. The peer-reviewed journal is published for sport history specialists who engage in research and/or teaching within an academic context as well as for those with special interest in sport history.

Deadline for proposals: August 30, 2024. Please send proposals and direct all questions to:

Carly Adams, Editor at carly.adams@uleth.ca

The following information should be provided in the proposal:

- Title of the Special Issue
- Names of the Guest Editor(s) and a brief (4pg max) CV for each.
- Brief rationale explaining the proposed theme and the significance of the theme.
- A brief outline of the possible topics that could fall under the proposed theme.
- A plan for obtaining quality papers (i.e., names of potential contributors)
- A proposed Call for Papers (please see past SHR special issue CFPs).
- Proposed timeline for the Special Issue - typically it takes 18-24months from the CFP to publication of the special issue.

* Proposals will be vetted by members of the SHR editorial board.
